TUESDAY, JUNE 13, 1882.

Memento.

Those who are anxious to have a "trifling" memento of the late Lord Beaconsfield will now have an opportunity to gratify their desire, the 390 stones which formed his Star of the Garter having been remounted in rings, with an Earl's coronet and the word "Beaconsfield" engraved inside each of them. The executors of the late Premier seemed to have exercised a wise discretion in declining to make this Star an heirloom, for there can be no possible advantage to the Disraeli family in handing down from generation to generation a costly Star, made for the late Marquis of Hertford, when he was given the Garter for building a large house in Piccadilly which he never resided in.

Emigration from Russia is progressing, and Jews are selling the whole of their property at any cost and hurrying to the frontier. The Jewish Committee at Berlin resolved to only help those who by the action of the Russian authorities and the destruction of their property were forced to emigrate.

A colored man entered a fashionable church, on a recent Sunday, and was proceeding down the aisle, when he was touched on the shoulder by the gentlemanly sexton, who said, "The seats in the rear row are reserved for colored people." "O, it doesn't matter," said the dark-skinned brother; "I'll sit anywhere. I'm not too proud to sit among the white folks." And he entered a softly-cushioned pew well down in the broad aisle.
